» THE PLOT ↗ Rewind Park tells the story of Roy, a 9-year-old boy who receives a Golden Ticket to the amusement park of his dreams, only to slowly realize that not everything is as magical as it seems. The park appears abandoned, yet its attractions continue operating normally despite the absence of visitors. Shadows emerge from the darkness, and a ghostly atmosphere surrounds the entire place.

Every event brings back memories of that magical day when Roy enjoyed the park alongside his brother, Joy. If it hadn't been for the strange attraction known as the "Molecular Time Tube," which apparently caused Joy — and everyone else visiting the park — to disappear, Roy would not be alone today, desperately searching for his brother while struggling with the disturbing anxiety of escaping the park.

Roy is confused. There are few explanations for what happened. Something broke, everything changed, and nothing is the same anymore. His brother Joy is gone, the people are gone as well, yet the park continues running as if nothing ever happened. Time never stopped, but the desire to remain there certainly did. What was once exciting and joyful has now become unsettling and questionable.

Something both familiar and deeply disturbing keeps intensifying Roy's urge to find his brother and escape the fantastic Rewind Park as quickly as possible.

By solving puzzles, riddles, and unlocking memories, Roy will begin to understand what truly happened and gradually uncover the hidden reality concealed within the park itself.

What once began as his greatest desire to enter the park will slowly transform into his overwhelming desire to escape it.
